Cornell, Harvard, MIT, Princeton, Rutgers, University of Pennsylvania and Yale are the main conference attendees, but it is to be noted that in the past three conferences Columbia, Drexel and University of Maryland had strong presence. UIUC has shown a strong presence at ITASA 2008 East Coast Conference.

Midwest Conferences

The average attendance for the ITASA Midwest Conference is: 158

The ITASA Midwest Conference attendees are from the majority (95%) from the Midwest-Northeast District. Another important fact is the host school represents the majority of the conference attendees. The top schools are always Northwestern University, University of Illinois, Urbana – Champaign and the University of Michigan - Ann Arbor. Northwestern University has put the bar high for the future conferences in the Midwest Region, since they finally broke the 200 attendees mark.

West Coast Conferences

The average attendance for the ITASA West Coast Conference is: 195.

A few points are to be noted. The Southern California attendees always have shown the strongest presence in ITASA West Coast Conferences. When the West Coast Conferences are held in Southern California, the Northern California participants are not as strong compare to the Southern California attendees at Northern California Conferences. The ITASA 2007 West Coast Conference at Stanford University exhibited a particularly strong attendance from the Midwest region especially the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign.
